Fun with NUMBERS! What does a preschooler need to learn about numbers? Children need to develop what experts call "number sense." Children develop a visual picture in their mind of what a number means. How can you help your child develop the one-to-one correspondence that helps children to understand and see that how many items are connected to each number that they say? Have fun with numbers and say "1-2-3-go!" as you hold up your fingers to count. Count as you go up or down the stairs or as you pick up toys off the floor. Count out the number of raisins in your snack or the number of people at the dinner table. Find numbers as you drive down the street. Talk about the numbers on your house. Have fun with a deck of cards and match numbers. Draw numbers with side walk chalk or roll our numbers with play-doh. Count every day! When you read you can point out the numbers on each page! Children need lots of experience with counting and talking about numbers to understand numbers or concepts like "more" or "less." Have fun with numbers.
